Cancer.Net includes many other sections about the medical and emotional aspects of cancer, both for the person diagnosed and their family members and friends. This website is meant to be a resource for you and your loved ones from the time of diagnosis, through treatment, and beyond. Here are a few sections that may get you started in exploring the rest of Cancer.Net:

- Search for a cancer specialist in your local area using this free database of doctors from the American Society of Clinical Oncology [2].

- Review dictionary articles to help understand medical phrases and terms used in cancer care and treatment [3].

- Read more about the first steps to take when newly diagnosed with cancer [4].

- Learn more about coping with the emotions that cancer can bring, including those within a family or a relationship. [5]

- Find a national, not-for-profit advocacy organization that may offer additional information, services, and support for people with this type of cancer [6].

- Explore next steps a person can take after active treatment is complete [7].
