

Effective Caregiving at Home

Taking care of a person with cancer is called being a caregiver. Caregiving is not easy, so it can be very helpful to look for additional help and support during this time. The tips in this fact sheet can help you.

How do I make caregiving a team effort?

You might feel alone, but caregiving can be a team effort. Family, friends, and volunteers can help, along with health care professionals. Each helper will bring different skills and strengths to caregiving, depending how close they live and their schedules. Try to have regular, informal conversations to talk about concerns and opinions so you can work together effectively. Whenever possible, make sure the person with cancer has a central role in these discussions. It can be very helpful to meet with the health care providers to get clear, accurate information about the cancer, including prognosis and treatment goals. Consider bringing a device to record these meetings and/or adult children or friends to help you manage all of the information.

How can I manage the caregiving responsibilities?

When you know what the patient needs and wants, it can be helpful to write down caregiving tasks in a list, such as giving care at home, providing transportation, offering companionship, and addressing financial issues. Then work together with friends and family to create a schedule that lists which person is available when and for what tasks. There are many online tools that allow you to easily communicate requests and information to people involved in the caregiving tasks. The goal is to plan ahead as much as possible to identify potential problems and prevent last-minute scheduling emergencies. When a problem arises, it's important to find out what's needed and follow through. Don't be afraid to seek advice from others and use creative solutions that work for you and the person you care for. Keep in mind that caregiving needs can change over time, so you may need to review tasks once in a while. Start planning by using the resources on the back of this fact sheet or found at www.cancer.net/caregiving.

Are there services available to help me with caregiving?

There are professional and volunteer caregiving services, including home care, meal delivery, and help with everyday activities. Some community agencies have volunteers who can help with transportation or advocate for health insurance or other benefits. You can get referrals to agencies and community resources from your loved one's doctor, oncology social worker, or nurse. You can also learn about available services from members of local or online support groups or state and county health agencies. If you are employed, ask your human resources manager about the Family Medical Leave Act, employee assistance program, and other benefits that can help with caregiving.

How can I take care of myself while caregiving?

Taking care of your own emotional health, physical needs, and personal responsibilities makes you a more effective caregiver. However, this can be difficult to do. A good first step is to recognize your own strengths and weaknesses as a caregiver so you can set boundaries and know when to ask for help. For example, have people reach you by email or text message, so you aren't interrupted by many phone calls. If you're having trouble coping in any way, talk with others who are helping you care for the person with cancer. You may also wish to talk with other friends, religious or spiritual advisors, counselors, other caregivers, and health care professionals.

Caregiving Action Plan

What type of support can be helpful for you and the patient? Use a chart like this to divide tasks among friends, family, professionals, and others.

Task	Family/Friends	Community Resources	Professional Resources
Companionship
Assisting with meals and grocery shopping
Doing household chores
Childcare
Pet care
Driving to and from appointments
Filling and picking up prescriptions
Keeping family and friends informed
Helping manage symptoms and side effects
Coordinating medical appointments
Giving medications
Handling insurance and billing issues

Do You Need Support?

You might find it helpful to talk with a doctor or a counselor if you check any of these boxes:

- | | |
|---|---|
| <input type="checkbox"/> I feel exhausted all of the time. | <input type="checkbox"/> I don't enjoy things I used to enjoy. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> I eat too little or too much. | <input type="checkbox"/> I am withdrawing from people. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> I get sick more often than usual. | <input type="checkbox"/> I cry a lot. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> I am not able to sleep well. | <input type="checkbox"/> I have headaches and/or unexplained pains. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> I feel impatient, irritated, or forgetful. | <input type="checkbox"/> I am drinking more alcohol than usual. |
| <input type="checkbox"/> I have trouble focusing or making decisions. | <input type="checkbox"/> I can't find any time for myself. |

For more information and tips on providing care to a loved one with cancer, ask for a copy of ASCO Answers Guide to Caregiving or visit www.cancer.net/caregiving. Or download Cancer.Net's free mobile app at www.cancer.net/app.

The ideas and opinions expressed here do not necessarily reflect the opinions of the American Society of Clinical Oncology (ASCO) or ASCO's Conquer Cancer Foundation. The information in this fact sheet is not intended as medical or legal advice, or as a substitute for consultation with a physician or other licensed health care provider. Patients with health care-related questions should call or see their physician or other health care provider promptly and should not disregard professional medical advice, or delay seeking it, because of information encountered here. The mention of any product, service, or treatment in this fact sheet should not be construed as an ASCO endorsement. ASCO is not responsible for any injury or damage to persons or property arising out of or related to any use of ASCO's patient education materials, or to any errors or omissions.

Health Care Professionals: To order more printed copies, please call 888-273-3508 or visit www.cancer.net/estore.

Cancer.Net

Doctor-Approved Patient Information from ASCO®

AMERICAN SOCIETY OF CLINICAL ONCOLOGY

2318 Mill Road, Suite 800, Alexandria, VA 22314 | Toll Free: 888 651 3038 | Phone: 571 483 1300

www.asco.org | www.cancer.net | www.conquer.org

© 2018 American Society of Clinical Oncology. For permissions information, contact permissions@asco.org.

MADE AVAILABLE THROUGH

CONQUER CANCER®
THE ASCO FOUNDATION

AAEC18